In the past two decades in Denmark I've been employed by small businesses throughout our landscape. In a range of roles & industries including hospitality, gardening, writing & retail. Alongside was paid & volunteer work with environmental organisations, for arts events and my own projects, as well as school volunteering. This diverse local experience and loving this place led me to run for council four years ago. The significant role of local government in a small community had also become apparent to me. Recognising my values in environment, social equity, community, and integrity, is another reason. These values have been useful compass points for me in council discussions and decision making. My background in science provides another check point for dealing with data-based information and maintaining logic in processes. With another term on council, I will continue finding the best way I can through sometimes conflicting community desires and needs.
